Trampled Rose by Shannon R.

Women in Ethiopia, as in many impoverished regions, are frequently pushed into marriage and childbirth at a young age. Aside from the psychological damage and perpetuation of poverty from one generation to the next, the practice can have tragic physical consequences as well. At nearly epidemic levels, a disability known as fistula plagues many of these women, sometimes lasting from teen years through maturity, sometimes ending in premature death, always resulting in social ostracization.

One amazing woman, Colorado Springs native Becky Kaiser, discovered this tragic situation as a tourist and was moved to devote her life to Ethiopian women stricken with fistula. For the past two years, the Zonta Club of the Pikes Peak Area has been a supporter of Kaiser's organization, The Trampled Rose. Located in Adis Abbaba, the organization operates a center where women can live while awaiting fistula surgery and where they can come afterward to learn skills to become self-sufficient.

With funds from last year's Glass Slipper Ball, Zonta purchased uniforms for the students at the Trampled Rose. Becky said that she was blown away by the difference those uniforms made on the women's self esteem. Having worn the same filthy dress for years, these women, for the first time in their lives, now own two pretty dresses and matching shoes. They now see themselves as learners gaining the skills necessary to become valuable members of society.

On Dec. 21, Becky hosted a tea and dessert evening for those interested in knowing all the latest news from Ethiopia. Zontian Shannon Rowan and several members of her family attended and this is what they learned.

Becky reported that she now lives and works full time in Adis Abbaba, coming home only for short visits every few months. Many other changes have also occurred during the past few months. The most important of these changes stemmed from a chance encounter with a member of another organization trying to eradicate fistula in Ethiopia, Amharic

Regional Development Association. This encounter has led to an exciting partnership between the two organizations. Now the women who come to the Trampled Rose go to one of the four hospitals that are under the auspices of this new organization for their fistula operations.

A new class of women, many of whom have been living with fistula for 20 to 50 years, are now living at the Trampled Rose, going through literacy and entrepreneurial programs. Basic math and reading programs have been condensed and intensified so that skills can be mastered in as little as two months. Jewelry making and hair styling are still taught but new business skills in soap making, pastry making and chicken raising have been added. The chicken raising has been particularly successful!

Recently, the Ethiopian government finally allowed The Trampled Rose to purchase a vehicle, which they will use for going into the countryside to pick up women living with fistula and also for transporting women to and from the hospitals. It was a grueling, frustrating, two-year process, requiring Becky to make daily trips to government offices to get one required document after another.

The vehicle will prove invaluable as Becky works to heal the minds and hearts (and hopefully the bodies, too) of the now 26,000 women who are on a waiting list to get into The Trampled Rose. At the close of her remarks, someone asked her whether it was realistic to believe that The Trampled Rose could serve 26,000 women. Becky responded, "Who thought, 7 years ago, that I would ever have been able to meet my original goal of helping five women with fistula? Reasonable is not the right word. It's what we have to do."

That's Becky!
